

Reading Aloud.

Reading to children is effective for:

- demonstrating a love and passion for reading
- exposing students to a variety of texts that they are unable to read themselves
- demonstrating the integration of sources of information
- demonstrating fluency, phrasing and intonation
- extending the student's vocabulary
- developing listening skills
- developing awareness of different styles of writing and text forms
- introducing texts with increasing complexity and abstract concepts

- taken from "Shine" publication July 2010 / Issue 6

